A MESSAGE ABOUT DIVERSITY AND INCLUSION

Duke University prides itself on its commitment to diversity and inclusion. We aspire to have every student feel and be welcomed, appreciated and understood. But, achieving our aspirations requires that each of us take responsibility for our own roles in building such a community. This isn’t easy work for any of us. It takes the understanding of our own particular history, the history of others and a commitment in word and behavior to making this a fair, equitable and exciting living and learning community. However, we have every confidence in your ability as Duke students to do so and we have high expectations that you will.

What does it take to build an inclusive community? First, we must be aware of our own perspectives and biases. To be sure, we each bring varying views on race, religion, sexuality and abilities, and we are entitled to our beliefs and opinions. But, as members of the Duke community, we are bound by several key principles:

• We are each composed of a variety of identity characteristics and at their intersection we are each unique.

• To understand others’ history, culture and ancestry is an act of learning that can only enhance our understanding and appreciation of others.

• Regardless of what we believe, we are bound by the Duke Community Standard, which demands respect for others and prohibits various behaviors. We are obligated to know those boundaries.

• Common expressions in popular culture may seem harmless, but often convey painful and offensive messages. We strive to understand how those expressions may hurt and commit to avoiding use of them.

• When we have opportunity to interrupt intended or ignorant harm to someone else, we act to do so.

We ask that you review these principles and reflect on your own distinctive characteristics. Celebrate who you are and the wonderful composition of identities that distinguish you from all others and take the time to understand and appreciate the magnificent array of compositions all around you. Every day you’ll discover even more beauty around you...the beauty of this incredible Duke community!

Welcome and Forever Duke!

Larry Moneta,
Vice President of Student Affairs Duke University

Ben Reese,
Vice President of Institutional Equity and Chief Diversity Officer,
Duke University
As a member of the Class of 2019, you are about to begin the journey of undergraduate education at Duke. The Orientation program is your key to a successful start as a new member of the community. It was designed to introduce you to many of the academic and co-curricular opportunities that Duke has to offer.

In this book you will find the schedule of events for your Orientation Welcome Week. Please take a few moments to read through it now and refer to it often to make the most of your orientation experience.

Again, welcome to Duke… the adventure has just begun.

A MESSAGE ABOUT ALCOHOL

Your college experience will be defined by virtually limitless access to academic opportunities and resources. It will also be a time of vast freedom coupled with newfound responsibilities. With those responsibilities come obligations. Be aware that Duke has clear expectations in effect not only during New Student Orientation (NSO), but year-round. These expectations are enumerated in policies that flow from the philosophy of the Duke Community Standard, our honor code.

Regarding alcohol, it is illegal and against Duke policy to purchase, possess, consume or distribute alcohol if you are under the age of 21, both on and off campus. Even if you are over 21, as a new student you are expected not to consume any alcohol during the entire week of NSO. Be aware that East Campus is an alcohol-free campus, within and around the residence halls. Failure to follow these expectations may result in university disciplinary action and/or criminal citations. University disciplinary action may impact future opportunities for you, including study abroad, participation in DukeEngage, and your admission to graduate/professional degree programs. Further information about Duke’s Alcohol policy can be found at: http://www.studentaffairs.duke.edu/conduct.

You will have the opportunity to discuss issues surrounding alcohol in detail during NSO. Please take this time to reflect on your values, the level of risk you are willing to assume and your personal responsibility. Duke cares about your well-being and strives to enhance your health and safety, not only during NSO, but throughout your years on campus. The vast majority of Duke students make responsible and thoughtful decisions about alcohol—we hope you will, too.
